VITAMIN

01

According to market sources, Zhejiang NHU Co., Ltd. raised the price of feed-grade vitamin A 500 to USD 9/KG effective January 6.

For vitamin E 50% feed grade, price disparities in overseas markets and exchange rate fluctuations have limited the adaptability of some export supplies. Producers are maintaining firm offers, resulting in continued tightening of market availability. As international holidays conclude, a new round of procurement demand is expected to emerge.

AMINO ACID

02

The lysine market remains generally stable, with prices still hovering near historical lows, factories face losses, and some second- and third-tier producers delayed capacity recovery. Earlier downstream stockbuilding led to higher order intake and tighter delivery schedules, while recent USD exchange rate movements have provided slight upward price support.

API

03

- Qianjiang Yongan Pharmaceutical Co., Ltd. announced plans to absorb and merge its wholly owned subsidiary, Hubei Langan Technology Co., Ltd. Upon completion, Langan Technology will be deregistered, with all assets, liabilities, operations, and rights transferred to the parent company in accordance with regulations.
- In the market, enrofloxacin and ciprofloxacin HCl prices remain at low levels. Enrofloxacin transactions above tonnage scale are reported at USD 20.52–21.16/KG, while ciprofloxacin HCl trades at USD 18–19.24/KG. Supply remains stable, and prices are expected to stay range-bound in the near term.

FOOD ADDITIVE

04

Microcyto Biotechnology Co., Ltd. recently secured approximately USD 42.99 million in a new equity financing round, with investors including the Beijing Advanced Materials Industry Investment Fund, Beijing Healthcare Industry Investment Fund, CCB Investment, and Zhongguancun Capital. The company has already commercialized several human and animal nutrition products, such as allulose, lutein, and mannitol. The new funds will be used to accelerate R&D and strategic deployment of methanol-based biomanufacturing pipelines for bulk bio-based products.
